Adobe Photoshop CS5 comes with the new Infinity Canvas. This is basically Photoshop's version of a tablet or mobile device. The canvas lets you use gestures to scale, rotate and pan your Photoshop document view. You can even tilt and rotate your tablet. The benefit is that you can zoom in or out, scroll up and down, and move the entire image as you would normally with Photoshop or a newer iPad device. You can also use the touch panel to lock your image, rotate it, choose one of the presets or draw directly over the canvas. The canvas also supports the new Photoshop Libraries feature. This new, smart, tablet-like canvas feature enables all the features of classical Photoshop to be used while navigating your page using gestures. It works in either landscape or portrait mode and the view and full-screen toggle controls are always visible at the top of the canvas. The controls are a bit different in iPad mode, but full of new functionality and intuitive. The new version of Photoshop includes Avigilon Connect. Avigilon Connect helps actions in Photoshop to perform automatically with the motion media file output of a D-Link DSR-523 DVR. Photoshop will get a lot better addressing profiles and multiple exposures but then when you graduate from CS2 it will go to CS3 and you will have to buy a Photoshop Lightroom plugin. Lightroom will get a lot better managing the metadata of your images but Photoshop will just get much better at merging images together. Will we see unique compositions in Photoshop where grouping of images is a thing? One of the things that Lightroom will still be lacking is the ability to edit RAW files at the highest levels.
